THE FOUR R'S ✓

At a modern American Military School the old "three r's" of "readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmatic" have been supplemented by a fourth--riding. This picture shows intimate scenes of young America as it is guided into manhood at the Culver Military Academy. The Culver cavalry troop starts on a two-day hike and the boys, after getting their horses in shape, set forth. Interesting "shots" of them as they progress on their journey, illustrating their orderly conduct, the lessons of self-reliance, and courage, their knowledge of essentials and their ability to really do things bring out clearly the great lesson of "preparedness". These boys being trained and hardened and taught to live healthy and cleanly lives, will grow up to be healthy men worthy of the name "American".
